

DOCTOR LO

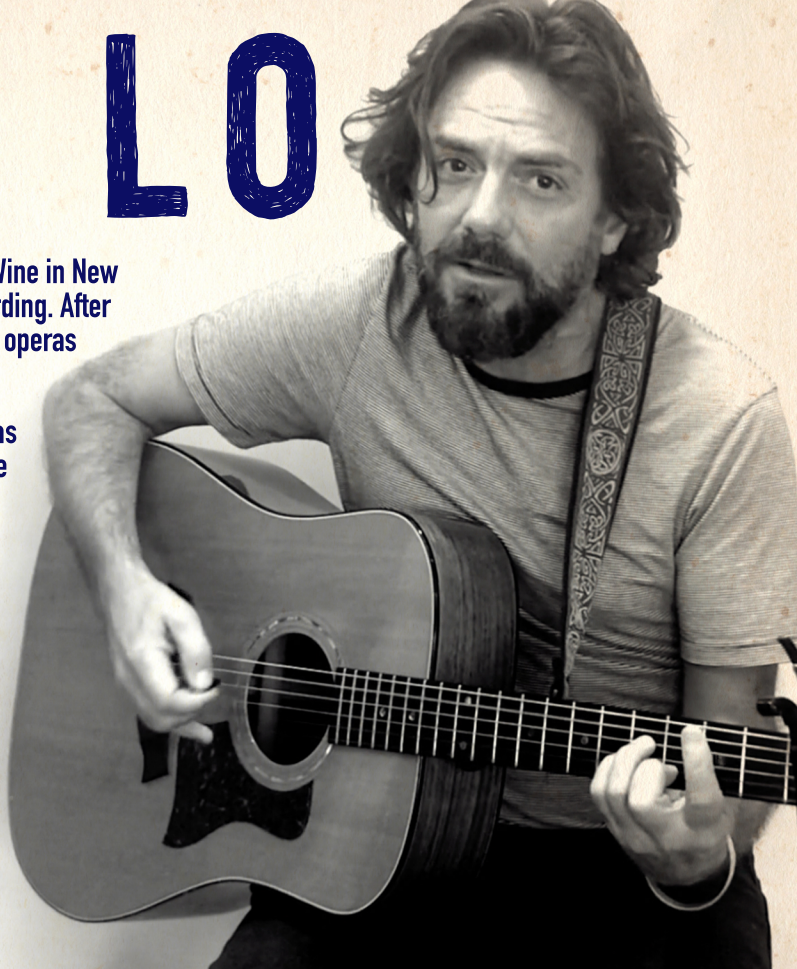

Doctor Lo Faber is best known for forming influential jam band God Street Wine in New York in 1988 and leading the band for 12 years of nonstop touring and recording. After GSW broke up in 2000 he toured with the Lo Faber Band and produced rock operas "Henry's House" and "Friday Night Freakshow."

After earning a PhD, moving to New Orleans, and spending several years as a college professor, Doctor Lo returned to a full time music career with the roots-country flavored "Bottomland" album in late 2019.

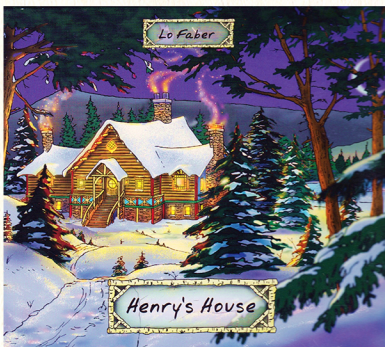

He is spending 2020 touring in a variety of formats - solo, duo, and full band - as well as sitting in with other artists on guitar and lap steel, and planning a second Doctor Lo album for release in the Fall.

Bottomland is a terrific album, adorned with all the trademark instrumental prowess, but it comes in a new format: played with different instruments; and complemented with dramatically improved singing. JamBase.com

I've always admired this guy's path because he's always sort of cutting himself out of the woods with a machete ... he's an omnivore of sorts always searching for new musical ground. Jake Feinberg podcast
